Mateusz Marczewski appointed Managing Director of Axpo in Poland

The Axpo Group confirmed the appointment of Mateusz Marczewski as Managing Director of its Polish subsidiary, having held the role of acting managing director for the past year. At the same time it was announced that previous managing director Grzegorz Biliński, who led Axpo in Poland for 12 years, was nominated to expand Axpo's business in the Asia-Pacific region as Head of Origination APAC. Both appointments ensure management continuity and demonstrate the continued growth of expertise and responsibility within Axpo's international business.

In Brief:

- Axpo confirms Mateusz Marczewski as Managing Director of Axpo in Poland, following 12 months as acting MD.
- Former MD Grzegorz Biliński, who led Axpo in Poland for 12 years, continues to develop Axpo's business in Asia Pacific and is named Head of Origination APAC.
- Appointments underline the importance of management continuity and the expansion of Axpo's international operations.

Mateusz Marczewski joined Axpo in Poland over nine years ago and has led the company as acting managing director since August 2025. His role was made permanent this month, formalising the subsidiary's management model and marking the start of the company's next phase of development in the Polish market.

With more than 15 years' experience, Marczewski is an energy sector expert with extensive knowledge of origination and the trading of electricity, gas and emissions across European markets. He began his career in commodities trading and market analysis at Morgan Stanley in London. After joining Axpo, he was responsible for co-operation with the largest industrial customers and renewable energy producers. He subsequently developed relationships with institutional customers and investors in the renewable energy sector, led the origination team and served on the Management Board of Axpo in Poland.

Commenting on his appointment, Mateusz Marczewski said: "Being confirmed as Managing Director of Axpo in Poland is, above all, an expression of the Axpo Group's confidence, for which I am grateful, and a commitment to continue our work. Poland's energy sector is on the threshold of major change. By combining Axpo's international experience with our knowledge of local conditions and customer needs, we want to play an active role in shaping the future of Poland's energy market. Our ambition is to implement innovative solutions that support producers, investors and customers, while continuing to develop our own generation portfolio. I am delighted to pursue these ambitions together with a fantastic team of experienced professionals. Their expertise, commitment and willingness to take responsibility give me confidence that we can make a meaningful contribution to a more flexible, competitive and sustainable energy sector in Poland."

Grzegorz Biliński, who led Axpo Polska for more than twelve years, has spent the past eighteen months developing the Axpo Group's business in Japan. He is now drawing on his experience in Poland and Asia in a broader regional role. As Head of Origination APAC, he is responsible for developing Axpo's origination business in the Asia-Pacific region.

Congratulating Grzegorz Biliński on his new role, Mateusz Marczewski said: "Grzegorz was instrumental in Axpo's growth in Poland and in building the company's strong market position. I would like to thank him for his leadership, commitment and many years of collaboration. We wish him every success as he continues to develop Axpo's business in the Asia-Pacific region."
